KMBQ Snow Report

Hey Snow Lovers, the Alaska Avalanche Information Center here with your weekly Q99.7 Snow Report thanks to support from AARP Alaska!

The National Weather Service is forecasting a slight chance of snow flurries today through Friday followed by clearing conditions into next week.

For backcountry skiers and snowboarders, Turnagain Pass and portions of the Kenai Mountains have a bit of new snow, but avalanche danger is MODERATE above 2500 feet so caution and conservative planning is highly recommended. Watch for wind loading on ridges at higher elevations.

Trails in Denali State Park, Chugach State Park, Hatcher Pass, and Nancy Lakes remain closed to snowmachines due to low snow levels. Recent avalanches have been observed in the Penguin Peak area so skiers should use caution in the Chugach east and south of Anchorage.

The AAIC is hosting a full day on the snow for snowmachine riders December 17th thanks to AARP Alaska. This course will be held in Thompson Pass where you'll find LOTS of snow. You can register and get lots more information on this class and other training opportunities at AlaskaSnow.org.

That's it for this week. This is Tim Grady reminding you that whatever you do, be careful out there and make sure you Live to Ride Another Day!
